Irreparable Loss. Fraternal Circles.

From 6 o'clock of the morning of the 18th inst., the flags of F. and A. Masons, of both sides of the line, Knights of Pythias and Odd Fellows, have been seen waving at half mast in honor and due respect to their foremost deceased member, Hon. Eb. Williams.

Every citizen of this county was acquainted with the good hearted old Judge, whose pleasant manners and behavior as well as his honorable career, distinguished him from the rest of his fellow citizens, and therefore we consider useless any detail tending to describe the life of one of the most prominent lawyers, but will only mention a few of the incidents that followed his death and up to the time he was interred, which tend to show that the benevolent old man was the object of high esteem amongst his fellow brethren and of the community in general.

The remains of the man that went through the passage of life, despite the age he reached, unconquered by the vicissitudes of same, had been laying in state up to two o'clock Saturday afternoon, the hour announced for the funeral.

Nearly every business place in town closed its doors in view of a petition, formulated by a brother Mason and circulated by an Odd Fellow among the different merchants, who willingly agreed to suspend business in order to afford an opportunity to themselves and their employees to attend the funeral.

On the stated hour all the fraternal societies above mentioned met in the Masonic Hall, thence under strict order of procession headed by the Minister of the Episcopal Church, Rev. McPherson, in his clerical attire, together with his Masonic regalia, proceeded to the residence of the deceased.

After the services were administered by Rev. McPherson, the coffin was carried to the hearse by six pallbearers as follows: two Masons, two Odd Fellows and two Knights of Pythias. This being done the funeral procession started to the cemetery in the same order.

On reaching the last residence of the virtuous old man, Rev. McPherson administered the last prayers, a chorus of prominent ladies and gentlemen sung some ritual hymns, after which Masons, Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias also administered their customary services.

The most heart breaking incident of the occasion was the farewell address by Lawyer José F. Guajardo, presiding officer of the Masonic Lodge Alonso Flores No. 16, who in the language of Cervantes and in the most adequate expressions paid to the deceased the last farewell in the name of his fellow members.

Among the floral offerings which had been very abundant, a wreath very artistically arranged and with the following inscription was noticed: "La Log. Alonso Flores No. 16 al cumplido Mas. Lic. Eb. Williams" that is to say, The Lodge Alonso Flores No. 16 to the dutiful Mason, Lawyer Eb. Williams.
